

This is Jiminy. The people of Bidyadanga /Frazier Downs, rang me after the cull and asked if I could save this little boy. He was the last horse left standing after the horrific cull of 662 horses by the Dept. of Agriculture WA. In 2008.

I brought him home in the back of our Troop Carrier, he slept on my lap, and I cared for him day and night for 12 days. Jiminy experienced love and trust and fun in his short life. Jiminy had missed out on his mother's colostrum which would have saved him from infection. He died suddenly on the 12th day.

This photo is of Brumby, a palomino wild horse trapped from Doongan station in the Kimberley, who was really keen to make friends with Jiminy. Jiminy not so keen!
